FACT: The Gimlet was first invented by British sailors serving in the Dutch East Indies in World War II. As was tradition until 1970, every British sailor was rationed a measure or tot (depending on the size of the cup) of rum once a week as a morale booster and medicinal disinfectant. As the war made rum difficult to come by sailors were issued with Gin made in British Raj India as well as a newly invented Sweetened lime juice made a company called Rose's which was aimed to curtail scurvy. As the sailors were so enamored with this delightful ration, they named after the surgeon general, Sir Thomas Gimlette of the British Navy who thought it a grand idea.
